SEE YOURSELF AT CAW:
CREATIVE ARTS WORKSHOP'S FALL TERM
BEGINS WITH OPEN ENROLLMENT

New Haven, CT – Skip the registration—for the moment—and just come over to Creative Arts Workshop to test drive a class during Open Enrollment from September 21st to September 26th. Located on 80 Audubon St. in New Haven, CAW welcomes all students—new and veteran—to sit in on a course before registering for it. “Open Enrollment is an opportunity for the shy, uninitiated, or commitment-phobic to try a course—or many—to decide if this is the art class for them,” says Daniel Fitzmaurice, Executive Director. “If it meets your expectation, go ahead and register. If a class in book arts is not what you thought it would be, try jewelry making. If your art is photography, cross-pollinate your creativity with a watercolor class to expand your imagination. We want people to experience all we have to offer before they make a decision for the term.”

There is no charge for Open Enrollment, and you don’t need to call ahead. But there are some restrictions: Open Enrollment does not extend beyond September 26th or apply to classes that begin later in the term, workshops, or young people’s classes.

“The third week in September is a great time to stop by CAW,” continues Fitzmaurice. “So much is going on: exhibitions, our Annual Meeting, and a view of our online Pop-Up Auction items. Come check it all out.”
