FALL COURSES AT CREATIVE ARTS WORKSHOP

New Haven, CT – "Back to school" can be sad words to some. But at Creative Arts Workshop, they generate excitement. "Not only can adults try something new in the visual arts, they can test drive a class for free during our first week of classes," says Executive Director Daniel Fitzmaurice. "We are ready to welcome students starting September 19th." CAW is located at 80 Audubon St. in New Haven. Complete course information is available online at CreativeArtsWorkshop.org or through the brochure, which can be picked up or mailed. Registration can be done online, in person, or by phone.

Enrollment is now underway for 85 classes and workshops. Adults can sign up for Bicycle Art, Stained Glass, and Digital Color Workflow among other time-tested favorites. The young people in your life may enjoy Teen Sewing, Let's Get Theatrical, or Mythical Monsters.

Speaking of young people, stop by during August to see the whimsical exhibition chock-a-block with the works of this summer's young artists. It is a great sampling of what can happen in this supportive arts environment. Also "on tap" is Eric Epstein's interactive Welcome to Whackville, an exhibition that invites visitors to hit the various pails, pots, and pipes for a percussive experience.

CAW wants to make the arts accessible to all. So tuition assistance and some scholarships are available. The deadline is September 2nd. One can also register through a payment plan and have tuition automatically deducted from a credit card.
